Preface

This report on “Plans for the 2012 BRICS Summit” draws from public sources to aid researchers and other stakeholders interested in the BRICS summit. It thus focuses on the political and diplomatic aspects of the BRICS as a plurilateral summit institution, and includes material on the physical summit, India’s preparations for the Delhi Summit and other BRICS-related meetings. It is updated periodically as information becomes available.

Introduction: India 2012 BRICS Summit

India will host the fourth BRICS summit in New Delhi on March 29, 2012. The summit will cover issues including, trade, the global economy, agriculture, health and innovation, international terrorism, climate change, food and energy security. However, other issues will be identified as India develops the agenda.

The first summit was held in 2009 in Russia, with the leaders from Brazil, Russia, India and China (BRIC). The same four leaders met for the second summit in Brazil in 2010. In 2011, with China as the host, South Africa attended for the first time. In 2012 India will host the fourth summit with the leaders of all five BRICS countries.

The Delhi Summit will be the first major diplomatic event India will host in 2012.

Agenda

Priority Themes

International attention on the BRICS countries has increased incrementally over the last decade. Recognizing this, Indian prime minister Manmohan Singh has stressed that with the relevance of the BRICS to the international order the summit agenda has gone far beyond purely economic issues to include international terrorism, climate change and food and energy security. Singh has outlined that the BRICS countries share similar positions on many issues including reform of the Bretton Woods institutions, trade protectionism and the Doha Development Round, achievement of the Millennium Development Goals (MDGs), and support for a multi-polar, equitable and democratic world order. The prime minister stressed that against the backdrop of these global challenges, it is “all the more essential for BRICS countries to closely consult with each other at this time.”¹ (December 15, 2011, Indo-Asian News Service)

Other

The Indian Ministry of External Affairs has created a contest to have a 2012 BRICS summit logo designed. The logo should bring out the essence of the group of countries. The competition kicks off the preparations for the summit and the deadline is January 7, 2012.² (December 23, 2011, Economic Times)

Bilateral Meetings

Singh is expected to hold bilateral meetings with each of the leaders from China, Brazil, Russia and South Africa on the margins of the summit.³ (December 23, 2011, Daily News and Analysis)

India and Russia

Russian president Dmitry Medvedev hosted Manmohan Singh for the 12th annual India-Russia Summit, which coincided with Russia’s accession to the World Trade Organization (WTO). Before departing for the three-day summit, Singh announced that he was looking forward to in-depth discussions with Medvedev on trade, Russia’s leadership in the global economic crisis, and political developments in West Asia, the Gulf and Afghanistan areas and their impact on peace and stability in the world. Singh said he was convinced that India-Russia consultations on global issues were more necessary than ever before.⁴ (December 15, 2011, United News of India) The leaders will pay special attention to the trade and investment dimension of India-Russia ties. The two countries have fixed a trade turnover target of $20 billion by 2015.⁵ (December 15, 2011, Indo-Asian News Service)

The bilateral conversation will also address how to make advances in international forums such as United Nations Security Council (UNSC), Group of 20 (G20), and the BRICS and East Asia Summit.⁶ (December 15, 2011, United News of India)

The Russian Ministry of Economic Development, the and the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP) organized a seminar on “Preparing for the BRICS Summit in 2012: Key Themes for Russia” to discuss Russia’s engagement within the BRICS partnership. The topics included sustainable development and innovation policy cooperation. The event was opened by

BRICS Trade Ministers, December 14, 2011

The BRICS trade ministers met on the sidelines of the ministerial conference of the WTO in Geneva on December 14, 2011. The ministers welcomed Russia's accession to the WTO, agreed to resist all forms of protectionism and recognized their pivotal role in furthering progress in the Doha round. They also emphasized the essential role of the WTO in monitoring the implementation of multilateral trade disciplines. At the end of the meeting, host Anand Sharma, India's minister of commerce and industry, invited the BRICS trade ministers to the second meeting in New Delhi in March 2012.⁸ (December 15, 2011, India Infoline News Service)

BRICS Deputy Foreign Ministers, November 24, 2011

The BRICS deputy ministers of foreign affairs on November 24, 2011, met to discuss the situation in the Middle East and North Africa (MENA). They emphasized the role of the UNSC and urged that any approach to a solution in Syria must be through peaceful negotiations and that "any external interference in Syria's affairs, not in accordance with the UN Charter, should be excluded." The meeting also addressed concerns about peace in the Gulf region and called for political dialogue in resolving differences.⁹ (November 24, 2011)

BRICS Agricultural Ministers, October 29-30, 2011

At their second meeting, on October 29-30, 2011, the BRICS agricultural ministers committed to enhance coordination and communication with international and regional organizations. They also pledged to enhance UN roles in helping BRICS and Africa's countries enhance food security through improved food production and establish a strategic alliance for agricultural research and technology cooperation and innovation, with India as the coordinating country for the latter.¹⁰ (October 30, 2011)

BRICS Finance Ministers, September 23, 2011

At the BRICS finance ministerial in Washington DC on September 23, 2011, the finance ministers highlighted the immediate problem of inadequate growth in developed countries. The solution requires continued international cooperation, long-term planning, and responsible macroeconomic and fiscal policies. They welcomed the fiscal package announced by the United States as well as the decisions taken by euro area countries to address financial tensions. The ministers are concerned with the slow pace of quota and governance reforms in the International Monetary Fund (IMF) and remain committed to work with the international community, specifically mentioning the G20 and the G20 Cannes Action Plan in the face of a slowdown in global economic growth.¹¹ (September 22, 2011)

BRICS Senior Officials, September 15, 2011

The first BRICS senior officials meeting was held in Dalian, China, on scientific and technological co-operation on September 15, 2011. The decision to hold the meeting was a Russian initiative made at the third summit of the BRICS in April 2011 in Sanya, China, and took place of the margins of the summer forum hosted by the World Economic Forum in Davos, Switzerland. Prior to the meeting it was expected that discussions would focus on ways to promote cooperation within the BRICS countries in science and high technology, with possibilities for joint implementation of innovation projects in microelectronics, nanotechnologies and materials, biotechnology, energy efficiency technology and renewable energy, and research on climate change. The meeting was also expected to consider establishing a working group on cooperation in the pharmaceutical industry.¹² (September 8, 2011, the Ministry of Foreign Affairs of the Russian Federation)

BRICS Health Ministers, July 11, 2011

The BRICS health ministers met for the first time on July 11, 2011. They agreed to support the work of health-related UN agencies and programs, improve health technology and innovative financing to ensure access to affordable, safe and effective care, and ensure respect of trade agreement and develop plans of action on building capacity in public health, innovation and intellectual property to open avenues for the BRICS countries to supply medicine to low- and middle-income countries. They also established a technical working group to discuss creating a
